

Beijing Women's Labor Camp

北京女子劳所

(Also Called: Beijing Xinan Women's Labor Camp 北京市新安女子劳所 and Beijing Tiantanghe Women's Labor Camp 天堂河女子劳教所)

Before the persecution of Falun Gong started, only one hundred to two hundred people were imprisoned at the Beijing Women's Labor Camp. After the suppression of Falun Gong began, the number of detainees increased rapidly from about one hundred in July 2000 to over thousands in April 2001. The authorities use various methods to torture practitioners. Also they force practitioners to work extended hours in a toxic environment. Practitioners usually have to work until midnight. After work, practitioners are often deprived of sleep, brainwashed and tortured.

Torture Methods:

Shocking with Electric Batons

In February 2001, Li Jing, Cheng Cuie, Jiao Xuexian, and another guard shocked Mr. Zheng Libin (above) with electric batons. Mr. Zheng is resident of Jiamusi City, Heilongjiang Province.

Riding the Airplane

This posture requires that one's head points downward, the back of the neck is against the wall, and the arms are raised with the hands touching the wall. Most people feel that their head will explode and cannot tolerate it for even ten minutes. However, Falun Gong practitioners are forced to "ride an airplane" for at least an hour. In Beijing Women's Labor Camp, one practitioner was forced to stay like this for a whole night simply because she would not renounce Falun Gong.

Squatting without Moving

Practitioners are forced to squat in the sun for several hours with their body weight resting on one leg while their upper body is kept straight and their hands are placed on their knees. They are forced to squat like this for several days, some for more than 40 days without a break.

A Special Case of Ms. Chen Shulan:

Ms. Chen Shulan 陈淑兰, 38, the oldest sister of Chen's family. She is from Zhangjiakou City, Hebei Province, and is detained at the Beijing Women's Labor Camp
